BePink becomes more and more international.
Daniela Levi, from Israel, and Georgia Williams, from New Zealand, are the newest additions to the team.

Two young talents are now part of Walter Zini's team. During the upcoming season BePink will be even more international thanks to Daniela and Georgia, both 20 years old. Their main goal is to grow as athletes and to gain more experience, to reach important results.

BePink created a team made up of more experienced athletes and younger athletes with lots of potential, in order to allow them all to grow together to compete on an international level and to become a point of reference in the pro cycling world.

Daniela has already met both her teammates and the team manager during the training camp in Cervinia, while the talented Georgia Williams has already given quite a few satisfactions to the team.

During the past weekend in fact, Georgia won the bronze medal in the New Zealand time trial national championship and she came really close to winning the road race, ranking second.

The team is even more international now: the Italian team members are Noemi Cantele, Simona Frapporti, Giulia Donato, Dalia Muccioli, Ilaria Sanguineti, Silvia Valsecchi and the younger Alice Algisi and Chiara Favaron Bissoli; whereas the international athletes are the strong Byelorussian racer Alena Amialiusik, the Slovenian Petra Zrimsek and the Swiss Doris Schweizer, as well as the Polish Malgorzata Wojtyra, protagonist of the Six Days race in Bremen.

BePink also introduces the new technical partner that created the team's bikes for the next season. The Comalli brothers, that have been a point of reference in the world of competitive cycling, have created a new brand, Kemo, synonym of bikes that combine style, technology and design.
